WHEN GRAMMAR CHECKERS CAN'T HELP YOU

"Write A+ Papers" helps struggling students learn the basics of grammar.

PLANTATION, FL, February 16 —Parents often hear the excuse, "I don't need to know how to punctuate. I use a grammar checker."

Grammar checking software, like spelling checkers, are great for catching many mistakes. But students can't always rely on them. If they do they can run into these common problems:

- The grammar checker doesn't know what a sentence is about, it is making a guess. Students still need to know if what it is suggesting is correct.
- Grammar checkers won't help students when they have to take a test or write a paper in class.
- Grammar checkers aren't available for the ACT and SAT essay questions.

Poorly punctuated papers lower student's grade points. Knowing how to punctuate builds confidence, freeing the student to focus on the creative elements of their writing.

The video "You vs The Rules of Grammar" (<https://youtu.be/7utsIC6-r0M>) explains how to solve this problem.

"Write A+ Papers", a new eBook, helps students quickly learn to punctuate. It is different from other grammar books; because, it uses the Sentence Identification Method to quickly teach the basics of punctuation. The principle behind the Sentence Identification Method is simple. There are only four types of sentences. Once you learn to identify them, punctuating them is easy.

"Write A+ Papers" was written by Beverly Herrick. Beverly was an English teacher for twenty years. When she found that many of her 12th grade students couldn't punctuate a sentence, she created the Sentence Identification Method to quickly teach them the basics of grammar. Beverly died in 1998, after a long battle with breast cancer.

To help pass on Beverly's legacy of student success, "Write A+ Papers" is currently offered at the special student rate of $2.99. "Write A+ Papers" is available on iBooks and Kindle.
